The Organizing Committee of the 12th International Conference on Gender and Women's Studies 2025 invites submissions of papers and panel proposals for the upcoming conference. This year's theme, "Gender, Equity, and Empowerment in a Changing World," aims to explore the evolving landscapes of gender and women's studies in response to the rapidly changing global environment. We welcome contributions that address challenges, opportunities, and innovative practices in advancing gender equity and empowerment across diverse contexts.

Conference Subthemes:

Gender and Technology: Exploring the role of technology in shaping gender identities, opportunities, and digital divides.

Feminist Theories and Practices: New directions in feminist thought, activism, and their application in contemporary contexts.

Intersectionality and Inclusion: Examining the intersections of gender with race, class, sexuality, disability, and other identities.

Global Perspectives on Gender Equity: Comparative studies on gender policies, movements, and progress across different regions.

Women's Health and Well-being: Addressing gender-specific health challenges, access to care, and holistic well-being.

Gender in Education: Innovations in gender-sensitive education, curriculum design, and the role of education in empowerment.

Gender, Media, and Representation: Analysis of gender representation in media, arts, and culture, and its impact on societal norms.

Economic Empowerment: Gendered perspectives on work, entrepreneurship, and economic inclusion.

Gender and Climate Change: Understanding the gendered impacts of environmental changes and sustainable development practices.

Policy and Advocacy: Strategies for promoting gender-equitable policies and legal frameworks.
